A pre-launch brand, ready to convert

MOLOSOC solves a simple at-home problem: apply foot cream, then stand and move immediately — without slipping or staining floors.

WHERE THE BRAND STANDS TODAY

- Live website with tracking (GA, GSC, Klaviyo)
- Active Meta ad campaigns and strong early engagement
- First production batch (1,000 pairs) arriving within 1–2 weeks
- Currently pre-revenue, running on a waitlist

STRATEGIC FOCUS

- Validate product-market fit
- Sell through the first inventory batch (500 units, public-facing)
- Establish a scalable, CAC-controlled acquisition engine
- Convert early interest into profitable sales — without inflating cost per acquisition

Solving a familiar friction, for a defined buyer

PRIMARY AUDIENCE — WOMEN 30–60

- Into self-care & at-home beauty routines
- Value foot health and practical lifestyle solutions
- Buying trigger: "Finally, I can moisturize and still function normally."

DEMAND VALIDATION SIGNALS

- High click-through rates on storytelling-led ads
- Active, growing waitlist signups
- Positive early feedback on softness, usability, comfort

HYPOTHESIS

There is clear consumer interest in a reusable, hygienic, non-slip solution that fits seamlessly into an existing routine — driven by both emotional pulls (comfort, cleanliness, avoiding hassle) and rational ones (reusable, safe nitrile, easy to wash).

Creating a micro-category, not competing in one

POSITIONING STATEMENT

CORE DIFFERENTIATORS

- Reusable nitrile material
- Non-slip walking support
- Designed specifically for at-home care
- Built by real users, not a faceless brand

INDIRECT COMPETITORS

- Disposable plastic wraps

Where this could stall, and the first 90 days

Overestimating lead conversion

Waitlist interest may not fully convert to purchase.

Mitigation: direct purchase funnel ready immediately

Inventory delay

Supply timing risk before launch.

Mitigation: transparent waitlist communication

High CAC

Rising ad costs could erode margin.

Mitigation: improve conversion rather than just spend more

Early trust gap

New, unproven brand.

Mitigation: UGC, testimonials, visible founder story
